STEADY ROUND SOCIAL EVENTS IS IN STORE FOR LOCAL SOCIETY

From now until the holiday rush prevents there will be a constant round of gayety, the social calendar indicating scores of delightful events scheduled for late November while early December dates are already being taken. It is as if society had been started for pleasure during the war period and was trying to make up for the days given over entirely to the country's needs. For two years fashionable folk gave their time solely to war activities, the few social affairs that were given being in the nature of benefit events. For the first time since the war normal pleasures have been resumed, but instead of few functions each week there are many and for those who go constantly existence is somewhat strenuous. There are to be several interesting Country club events this month, including a dinner dance Thursday evening, a bridge tea Saturday afternoon and a bridge and a tea dance the following Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Bennett Give Smart Dinner Dance

Notable among the smart events of autumn was the dinner dance given by Mr. and Mrs. Paul Bennett at the Country club, Thursday evening, when they entertained in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bennett of Los Angeles. A red color scheme was used in decoration and was carried out in artistic use of chrysanthemums, the brilliant scarlet tones being accentuated in hand painted place cards. The ten tables around which the eighty guests were gathered had like decoration, the shaded lights casting a delightful glow. The guests of honor who were extensively feted during their fortnight's stay here returned last evening to their California home.

Mr. and Mrs. Winfield Hartnaff Entertain the Dinner Club
The dinner club met Tuesday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Winfield Hartnaff. Mrs. Paul Bennett making the highest score at bridge which followed. The guests of honor were Mr. and Mrs. Harold C. Bennett and Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Dorris.

The publicity committee of the Phoenix branch of the Needlework Guild has submitted the following article which will be of interest to those who are members and appreciate the work of the organization in this city and elsewhere:

Such an array of garments and household linen as appeared on a long table at the open day of the Woman's club on Tuesday last! All connected in the name of the Needlework Guild of America, Phoenix branch. Several hundred articles to make people warmer and happier this winter.

Many people have asked about the name of the organization, of which there are now over 450 branches in 31 states. It was formed a good many years ago in England, in the days when every woman was proud of her skill in needlework and made most of the garments in every day use. The Needlework Guild was started in this country in 1885 by a lady from Philadelphia, who learned of the great good done by the organization, when traveling through England. You see, in 1885 many women were still accomplished in cutting and sewing garments. In these days, women seem to prefer other lines of activity, so the majority of garments given are bought by the donors. The quaint name, Needlework Guild, still remains to remind us of other days.

The Phoenix branch is governed by the officers and directors. To become a director, a woman must secure ten persons besides herself who will give her a letter of introduction to the guild, hold linen, and one paying member. Stress is laid on the word "new." There are many suitable agencies to handle partly worn garments, but the guild, by its charter, cannot accept them. Men, women and children may join the guild. There are no fees, fines or dues. Simply two new garments from each member once a year, in November, and one meeting only—the annual meeting in November.

For as some women who are shut in at home a good deal and are fond of

The DRESSES and GOWNS—the MEN'S SUITS and DINNER CLOTHES—the fancy VESTS, NECKTIES and CHILDREN'S APPAREL!

We'll do them perfectly, and get them BACK in time.

Los Olivos

Many years ago, a poet, speaking of various things, said that, "Many a flower is born to blush unseen." This ad is intended to prevent your sharing that dark obscurity.

Not saying, but what you are probably aware of the location of Los Olivos—where it starts, and how far north it goes, and how far to the east. But there is a wrong way and a right way to really study and observe this refined and dignified home section.

The wrong way is to drive out Central Avenue, and as you pass McDowell Road, say to yourself, "Here commences Los Olivos, and it goes north past the Heard home." Now that is not the real way to study Los Olivos. You are on the extreme western edge, and pass four very lovely homes—but—well, you miss so much. Let me tell you how to really appreciate this sub-division.

Go north on Central Avenue to Coronado Road, which is one block north of McDowell Road—turn east, and drive slowly to Seventh Street (which, by the way, is in for the new county paving). On reaching Seventh Street, turn one block north to Palm Lane, and drive slowly to Central Avenue—then one block north to Monte Vista road, and turn east. As you cross the Indian car line and drive slowly toward Seventh Street once more, notice the lots on either side. They are 100 by 300 feet—all improvements are in, fine, caliche road—parking strip between curb and sidewalk.

Can you beat it? No, you can't. Your interest in Los Olivos will have become enthused by studying it in this way—or it will be our pleasure to enthruse your interest by having one of our sales force show you the property.
